

Davide Parisotto (Asolo, 1963) has wide and solid experience in the footwear sector, having operated in it for more than forty years. He joined the company in 1978 as a production worker; by 1990 he was on the Board of Directors. Today he is the board member responsible for environmental and industrial safety and industrial relations.

He takes care of product quality and innovation in the production process, and along the way has taken an interest in research and development, with a particular focus on the analysis, design and execution of new products. He was also behind the opening of the direct production sites at Acellum in Romania, Songlian in the PRC and Parilab in Serbia.

He personally follows the development of innovative solutions to manage the complex phases of footwear production. Many of his ideas have been patented and have become true benchmarks in the sector. This is why he appears in several official communications presenting SCARPA's cutting-edge technology dressed in an apron, symbol of the Parisotto family's spirit of craftsmanship and commitment to excellence.
